PARIS, July 25.—Premier Poincare is carrying on an active correspondence with Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain in an endeavor to prepare him in advance of their conference next week for the vast French program for solving Germany's difficulties, which is being drawn up at the Quai d'Orsay. United Allied occupation of more German territory is the main point to which Poincare will try to induce Lloyd George to agree in a parley which is expected to last more than a week.

Poincare is no longer ready to believe any of Germany's promises, and he doesn't consider the plan of control proposed by the committee on guarantees sufficient unless enforced in a serious manner by the occupation of more territory. If Poincare fails to induce Lloyd George to agree to his plan he is likely to rise up and announce that France will advance alone. The French plan already worked out does not call for a real occupation in the ordinary sense, but merely a cordon of perhaps 50,000 troops drawn around the coal districts, in order to control the shipments of this necessity toward Germany, and to have the possibility of taxing the output in case Germany fails to meet her obligations. It is believed this movement could be accomplished without difficulty by advancing troops already occupying the left bank of the Rhine and replacing them with soldiers quartered in other parts of France.

The War Ministry already has prepared for this movement by unostentatiously ordering regiments to proceed immediately to Alsace-Lorraine, where the effectives will be doubled at once. France hopes that the difference in viewpoint between the two Premiers, which has been growing less, will disappear before the conference. England attributes Germany's inability to pay reparations to mere economic reasons, and believes Berlin powerless to restore her credit alone. The French admit the seriousness of the economic difficulties of Germany and think they must be charged by the common effort of all powers, but Poincare holds to the opinion that Germany is herself mostly responsible for the present situation.

Being thoroughly convinced of Germany's bad faith and untrustworthiness, Poincare will argue that further ultimatums are unnecessary and it is essential the Allies hold something in hand. The French Premier has reached the extreme limit of what he feels he can impose on the French public, and he wouldn't even allow a short moratorium unless new guarantees were taken.

In Which Rival Looms Big
BOSTON, July 25.—A motion picture news film, depicting a recent seizure of opium and smoking paraphernalia, valued at $100,000, in Boston's Chinatown, has been banned by Mayor Curley on the ground that it is "political." District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien is prominent in the picture. The District Attorney campaigned against Curley in the last election.

Dr. Edwin C. Ruth, head of the New England section of the Federal narcotic division, said to-day that he had requested Mr. O'Brien to appear in the picture after he had learned that the members of the police narcotic squad would not allow themselves to be photographed.

Two Film Firms Fined For Censorship Breaches

One Assessed $250, Another $100; First Cash Penalties Under New State Law

The first fines to be imposed for violation of the state motion picture law were entered yesterday by Justices Freschi, Healy and Vorhees in Court of Special Sessions. In each case the Motion Picture Commission was the complainant.

The Arrow Exchange, of 729 Seventh Avenue, was fined $250 for releasing "Stay Down East" without first making eliminations ordered by the board.

Justice Freschi in imposing the sentences said:

"These fines are no criterion of the punishment that may be imposed in future cases. Each case must stand on its own merits. This is a good law and we are going to give it all the help we can."

The Associated First National Pictures, of 729 Seventh Avenue, received a suspended sentence on two violations. In all instances the companies pleaded guilty. Deputy Attorney General Walker conducted the prosecutions.

Artists' League to Prosecute Dealers in Bogus Paintings

Will Take Immediate Steps to Prevent Copies of Works by Dead and Living Masters Being Sold as Originals

The League of American Artists, Inc., 119 East Nineteenth Street, announced yesterday that it will take immediate steps against art dealers in New York and throughout the country who are selling copies of the paintings of dead and living masters as originals by forging the signature of the artist. This announcement was precipitated by the recent exposure in Paris of the forged paintings of the late Eugene Carriere and a number of the masters of antiquity, which persuaded the league to make public its investigations along the same lines in this country.

According to Julian Bowes, managing secretary of the league, the dealers of America have gone those of Europe one better in that they are not satisfied with forging the names of the masters long since dead, but even employ artists to make copies of the paintings of the more famous living artists of to-day. Among the prominent living artists whose signatures have been forged frequently, said Mr. Bowes, are Emil Carlsen and George Bellows, who have recently been brought face to face with some of these bogus paintings bearing their copied signatures.

The league is a business organization formed to help the artist in a business way, and Mr. Bowes said that it has been investigating these conditions for more than a year. A legal department has been formed, and it is now considering that it has enough evidence to begin prosecutions. The league also intends to have a bureau in the organization where any prospective purchaser of a picture may come and find out its authenticity.

The league is national in its scope and has enrolled so far more than 1,600 members, among whom are John Sloan, president of the Independent Society; Charles Dana Gibson, president of the Illustrators; Harry Watrous, vice-president of the National Academy of Design; Robert Aitken, president of the National Sculpture Society; and Emily Nichols Hatch, president of the Women Painters and Sculptors.

Peace Mission Intercedes to Aid De Valera

Suggests New Parliament and Members of Old Dail Meet at Once to Draft Settlement of Civil War

Collins Believed Hostile

Regulars Continue Advance in Mayo, Capture Castlebar Without Firing Shot

DUBLIN, July 25 (By The Associated Press).—The Lord Mayor of Cork and other delegates have arrived here on a peace mission, according to the correspondent of "The Times" of London, who says he learns their proposal is that the members of the new Irish Parliament and of the old Dail Eireann shall meet forthwith to reach terms of settlement. He expresses the belief, however, that the provisional government officials will consent to nothing short of complete surrender and the laying down of arms by the republicans.

The correspondent has information also that the provisional government has decided upon a further postponement of the meeting of the new Parliament.

Nationalists Take Castlebar
National forces operating from Claremorris, County Mayo, are continuing their advance. They have occupied Castlebar without the firing of a shot. The irregular troops prior to the evacuation burned numerous buildings, including the jail, the courthouse and the barracks. Irregulars attacked the barracks at Eyre Court, County Galway. The garrison of eight men was compelled to surrender. The irregulars then burned the barracks.

Two attempts were made by irregular troops to rescue seventy prisoners from a train going from Ennisclorthy to Berlin. The first attempt was made outside Wexford. In the fighting two National soldiers were killed and seven wounded. This having failed, irregulars in Dublin took up positions on the roofs of houses near Harcourt Street station and made another attempt.

The seventy prisoners were lined up on the station platform under a strong guard, while some three hundred spectators stood about. Just as the captives were being marched away a heavy fire was opened upon the crowd. Many threw themselves flat on their faces. The national troops replied to the fire of the irregulars for nearly half an hour. Seven persons were wounded. The prisoners were safely escorted to jail.

Rebel in Woman's Guise
Captain Kennedy, one of the leaders of the irregular forces, has been captured by Free State troops near Thurles. He was disguised as a woman. Eamon de Valera accompanied the insurgents last Sunday to Tipperary, but, according to reports, departed for Cashel, twelve miles distant, the next day. The strain of recent events is said to have left him pale and wan.

Resolute Sails Late; Held By Broken Piston Valve
Difficulty encountered in fitting a new piston valve to replace a broken part delayed for nearly four hours yesterday the sailing of the United American liner Resolute.

Officials of the company said the delay was the most serious since the consolidation of the Hamburg-American and the United American steamship interests. The repairs, while of a minor nature, they explained, were necessary to the operation of the ship. The part that had to be replaced had to be made especially, and when delivered to the vessel was found not to fit. Mechanics were at work up to the time of departure.

When the Resolute finally sailed she carried with her two "workaways," C. C. Peters, of Seattle, Wash., and the Yale Club, New York, and Gilbert Stanley, of Great Barrington, Mass. Both are graduates of Yale, class of '20, and have been doing manual labor in every branch of the shipping business since leaving college. Some time ago their work attracted the attention of W. A. Harriman, chairman of the United American Lines, and he sent them once to Panama and several times on coastwise trips.

On the Resolute they will work their way as waiters and in the purser's office, and Mr. Harriman has berths ready for them in the line's Hamburg office when they arrive there, in order to give them a chance to learn something of the foreign side of the business.
